The ardent baseball fan will today recall yesterday's ball game with Chicago principally because we lost it and, stranger yet, on account of Pitcher Patten's home run drive over the advertise-ment of the cigar named after a fat gentleman who is endeavoring to elevate the stage in this country. All other hits and even a number of excellent plays that were made pale into utter insignificance when brought into comparison with this noble bang of Mr. Patten.

It was the surprise of the year, and no one was more dazed than Mr. Patten him-self. For, it should be remarked, the local pitcher has never boasted of his prowess as a hitter, and heretofore has been content to have his name figure in the space in the score allotted to the strike outs. It is a matter of record that Patten can be depended upon to strike out with greater regularity than any other member of Boss Manning's crew of base-ball pirates. Time and again this year has he gone to the plate when the local fellows have had men on bases and in every instance he has simply wallowed in strikes. Manager Manning has been considering the advisability of eliminating Patten altogether from the batting order of the team, or else entering into an agreement with the visiting managers whereby the twirler may be allowed to have seven strikes instead of the customary three. This method, Mr. Manning arrued, might result in cutting down the out with greater regularity than any other argued, might result in cutting down the awful strike-out record of his south-wing-ed employe. But after yesterday's spectacular swat Mr. Patten will have to go out being the recipient of special favors in the shape of extra strikes and will be hereafter marked as a man who has had the temerity to drive a ball over the left-field fence of the local grounds.

When asked as to the manner in which he struck the ball, after the game yesterday, as he was reading congratulatory telegrams from Joe Quinn, Colonel Lajole, and Shortstop Clingman, Mr. Patten said that he didn't know exactly, but thought it was because he had closed his eyes as soon as he observed Clarke Griffith draw back his arm and go through the numerous song and dance moves preliminary to letting the ball shoot up to the plate.

To quote Mr. Patten regarding the historic occurrence, "I just closed my eyes and put all my strength behind the bat. and put all my strength behind the bat Clingmann, Farrell, and Grady doubled I knew I could knock the ball out of the up Hartman and Mertes in the second on And I knew I was about due to do some-

Clarke Griffith, the Pooh-Bah of the Chicago aggregation, adopts a song-and-dance pre-liminary movement, but he displays quite an ability in the pitching line. The etching represents Mr. Griffith in the act of getting read; a wind an out-shoot around the neck of all the control of the contr

John Bridge last night told me that I would soon meet an enemy who would seek my destruction, and from the manner in which she described my foe I readlly recognized Clarke Griffith. tune teller told me I would surmount all difficulties which this enemy would place in my path and I knew then that I was bound to do something out of the ordihary. I suppose if I hadn't closed my 'Batted for cyes I would not have hit the ball, but Baltimore... Baltimore...

Patten trotted around the bags while the multitude yelled itself hoarse, and over on the bench the players crowded around to congratulate the mighty hitter. Clarke Griffith said but little, but it was a severe setback to his ambitions. The 4dea of having a batter of the Patten stripe land on one of his famed outcurves for four bases was too much for him. For several moments he looked as if he had taken a foolish powder and his retort to Patten's boastful remark about the swipe would about as intelligent in cold type as a college yell. Mr. Patten did not care so very much that he lost his game after the honor of that he lost his game after the honor of reaking this noble homer. His pitching throughout the game was good, and while the Senators secured more his off of Grif-fith than the visitors did from the local lox representative, the Chicagos planted theirs consocutively, and they were most-ly good for either two or three bases each, while the hits of the local men were sin-gles, and usually came at periods when there was no one on bases or else when

First Rasemin Michael Grady chakes his fist at Umpire Haskell and tells him that Shugart's triple in the eighth imning was a foul. Haskell said: "Nay, nay, Michael. Fain would! I have thee subside, else I shall be compelled to sook thee to the extent of ten cases." Grady was right, however; but the fear of being set back on salary day made him subside.

two men were out. Griffith had good control and plenty of speed and received splendid support.

The first inning was disastrous to the Senators. How opened the affair with a triple to the ciuthonse in right field. Then Jones stepped in front of one of Patter's slow curves, and walked. After Mertes had gone out. Clingman to Grady, Hartman singled, and scored Hoy and Jones. McFarfand's double sent Hartman across the rubber, and Shugart's hit for one bag permitted Shugair to get home with the fourth tally. In the sixth, Shugart was parsed to the initial bag, and was sent home, on Sullivan's hit for a trio of bases, and when Griffith had a chance to hit the ball he sent it out to the clubhouse, where a youth picked it up and "blocked" it. By the time Pitcher Patten had the sphere, Griffith had circled the cushions and ahead of him had come Sullivan. Isbell's triple and Shugart's three-bagger and Sullivan's out to Waldron gave the Chies two additional runs in the eighth. The Senatorial scoring was accomplished in the first, when Waldron got around the bases on a single, assisted by Farrell's safe crack and outs of Dungan and Clarke. Poster taillied in the fourth on a fielder's choice and successive hits by Counhilm and Clingman. Patten's home

Carrie. Poster tailed in the fourth on a fielder's choice and successive hits by Coughlin and Clingman. Patten's home run gave the local men their last score. The individual performances are herewith sized up in detail:

Notes of the Game.

Chicago agair, today. Chicago agair, today.

Ciarke Griffi'h appeared greatly worried when he heard of Boston's victory yesterday afternoon. At the moment he received the news he was in the midst of a contest in which he was the principal figure, and there was no telling at what moment the Washingtons were apt to cut loose and hit him freely.

Conclude:

Coughlin's three-bagger, made in the sixth was one of the hest bits of the affectioon. It came when there were two men out, and Clingman was unequal to the task of scoring his fellow player. The secre credits Snugart with a three-bagger which he made in the eighth. The nit was a gift from Umpire Huadesil, as the hall landed fully a foot outside of the foul line, but Haskell did not see it that way, even after Captain Clarke had regis-tered a vehoment kick.

Jordan were a Washington uniform yes-terday, although there was some talk during the day that Manager Manales had decided to allow him to return to a fast play.

Mercer was sent in to bat for Patten in the last inning, but struck wildly at three of Griffith's curves.

Grady was worked eleverly by Griffith with wide out curves. The Senator stood too far away from the plate to connect with the ball with any degree of effectiveness, and Griffith evidently was well aware of the fact. Callahan and Lee will probably be the oposing pitchers this afternoon.

The Champions Defent the Quakers in Two Games. PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—Brooklyn played high-class baseball here today and defeated Philadelphia in a double head-er, thereby passing St. Louis in the race for the National League champsionship. In the first game it was Townsend against Donovan, and the latter had sevcral shades the better of it. In the second the Phillies played flawless ball in the field, but there were stages when at but their work was decidedly amateurish.
